

The customers of XM Satellite Radio are paying for complete coverage of news, sports, weather, traffic, and a variety of entertainment channels so we don't have to listen to advertisements all day long. I doubt if more than 15% of the population is willing to pay for that kind of broadcasting.

The National Association of Broadcasters should not have a monopoly on the airwaves. XM Radio is not going to hurt their revenues to any significant extent, but if XM radio does have a significant impact, maybe it will result in improved broadcasting to the general public. Isn't that what the FCC wants?

I for one strongly oppose HR 4026, and expect my congressman to support good clean competition by voting against this bill.
